The Sir James McDonald Pipe Band is recognized as a non-profit organization authorized to receive tax-deductible contributions as allowed by law. The band operates under the tax-exempt organization Highland Musical Arts.

How will your money help the Sir James McDonald Pipe Band?

- You will help with expenses of travel to Glasgow, Scotland. This includes airfare, lodging in low-cost dormitories, ground travel to competitions and learning activities.
- You will support excellence. The commitment of each and every member to preparedness and excellence is the band's fundamental value. The rewards of demonstrated effort are recognized, rather than "talent". The study of music has been linked to academic achievement, but serious musicians share other qualities: creative thinking, collaboration, self-discipline and the ability to listen and focus on complex ideas.
- You will help preserve a unique musical heritage. Quality learning for young pipers and drummers will keep this traditional art form alive in the Pacific Northwest. The Sir James McDonald Pipe Band shares the music of pipes and drums in communities all over the Northwest.
